

Little Silver | Band Biography

www.littlesilvermusic.com

Little Silver is Erika Simonian and Steve Curtis, whose two voices square off in lockstep over the bed of their guitars. The band's debut recording The Stolen Souvenir is a bare and intimate window onto a small set of gorgeous songs, and in April 2012 they released Dress Up, a striking and spare interpretation of many of their favorite cover songs. Both albums are out on their Record Park label.

Erika is a one decade veteran of NYC's songwriter circle, with praise from The New York Times and a Lilith Fair appearance to her name, and Steve is a founding member of and writer for Hem, with whom he has sold over 85,000 records worldwide and performed all over. Hem's trademark jewelbox lullabies are a central feature of Little Silver's sound as well, though with the help of Ray Rizzo on drums (Dawn Landes, Doveman) and David Tarica on bass (Mia Riddle), the band also reaches out, venturing into bold and experimental sounds.

The Stolen Souvenir was co-produced by Phil Palazzolo (New Pornographers, Ted Leo) and mixed by Brandon Eggleston (The Mountain Goats, Josh Ritter). Dress Up was co-produced and recorded by Gary Maurer (Hem). The full band is back in the studio this spring and summer to put together a longplaying record, and the both the full quartet and the duo arrangement will be on the road through 2013.
